Notes from the Director

Reynolds Price believes in the act of writing as the highest form of self-examination. By altering the experiences and characters from his own life just enough to, create remarkable fiction, he brings them into a sharper and more comprehensible focus. His introspection is generous and courageous, for it centers on the shifting complexities and hazards of human relationships.

August Snow is not a play of how two people can meet and fall in love, or of how they pursue the miracle of eternal happiness together. It is a far more eloquent statement that Price seeks to offer. This is simply a story of how a young couple makes it through one particular day and earns the right to discover that there is no more difficult a task, no greater pain, no larger act of will, than that of giving yourself to someone else with the hope of love. Only sometimes do we succeed. The challenge lies in what Price has learned from his own work, a part of which follows:

"The world exists. It is not yourself.
Plunge in it for healing, blessed exhaustion, and the risk of warmth."

It is a glorious truth to share.

—Richard Klautsch

About the Playwright

Reynolds Price was born in Macon, North Carolina, in 1933. After undergraduate studies at Duke University and graduate work as a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University, he joined the Duke University faculty in 1958, where he remains James B. Duke Professor of English. His published writing career began in 1962 when his first novel, A Long and Happy Life, won the William Faulkner Award. Since that time, he has published over 19 works in 16 languages, including the award-winning Kate Vaiden and his most recent novel, The Tongues of Angels. Although he has written in all genres of literature, Mr. Price did not begin his playwrighting career until 1978, when Early Dark was first performed at New York's WPA Theatre. In 1984, Mr. Price was diagnosed with cancer of the spine. After treatment and surgery, he returned to writing with August Snow, the first in a trilogy of plays entitled New Music. August Snow was first staged at Hendrix College in Arkansas, and the entire trilogy was performed by the Cleveland Play House in the fall of 1989.
